Cliffs of moher

Your driver will wait so you can take your time to explore and take in the sea breeze on the cliff walk. Standing tall and spectacular at 214 metres above the water and stretching for 8 kilometers in the heart of the Burren National Park, these cliffs are a site to behold.

Just a short walk from the car park is St Brigid's Holy Well. Holy Wells are dotted all over Ireland but this particular one is well worth a visit while you're nearby.

Marked by a statue of St Brigid surrounded by a glass case, it comprises of an upper and lower sanctuary where one can leave offerings or have a moment of reflection and peace.

If you want a taste of some authentic Irish traditional music, there's nowhere better than Doolin, the nearest village to the cliffs. After the sun goes down, the small local bars come alive with the sounds of lively traditional music with the best musicians of the area joining together to have a "seisiún", an Irish traditional music session.

Your driver will know all the best spots. These gatherings tend to be informal and casual with people being invited to offer their talents such as singing or playing instruments such as the fiddle, concertina, flute, tin whistle and bodhrán. A good seisiún is an unforgettable experience to see the true Irish culture in action.

Heading north, see the famed moon-like landscape of The Burren including Poulnabrone Dolmen – the oldest megalithic monument in Ireland. Your driver will take you on one of Ireland’s most famous drives around Black Head along the Wild Atlantic Way. From here the Aran Islands, Connemara and Galway Bay can all be seen clearly.
